Four themes, all emphasizing need for cultural humility in sexual healthcare

- Sexual pleasure and satisfaction
 - Lower sexual experience and knowledge in migrant women, leading to lower reported pleasure
 - Highly heterogeneous findings
- Sexual desire and arousal
 - Greater desire/arousal problems in migrant women, but not necessarily greater distress
- Sexual attitudes
 - Perceived lower control over sexuality in migrant women
 - Greater sexual guilt if cultural sexual standards not met
- Acculturation
 - Lower mainstream acculturation may contribute to higher anxiety around sexuality

Clinical recommendations

- Directly assess sexual knowledge
 - Ask about history of sexual healthcare experiences
- Ask for permission to offer education and information on sexuality
 - Normalize having questions about one's sexuality
 - Normalize talking to medical provider about sexuality
- Reassure patients with high sex guilt & anxiety
 - Especially as they adjust to a new culture with different sexual ideals
 - Promote pleasure as a positive & appropriate goal
- Use culturally sensitive assessment tools
 - And help us researchers develop more!
